What are the Costs?

Deutsche Bank charges fees or commission for the services provided by it in relation to the relevant Product, which may include ongoing as well as initial charges. In addition, certain third party costs may be payable, as indicated. Further details of fees and commission are set out in documentation provided to you separately.

The cost illustration below is based on providing the client with Clearing only Services under which Deutsche Bank will act as clearing broker to clear transactions on the relevant CCP, which have been executed, by a separate executing broker.

The Costs and Charges figures provided in the table below are illustrative of the Costs and Charges associated with providing clearing services for this particular Product but (to the extent indicated in this document) may not reflect the Costs and Charges associated with any actual transaction.

Deutsche Bank's charges for the provision of clearing services to a specific client are calculated based on a number of variable factors. A client may receive a discount or a reduction from the maximum charges depending on these factors and their application to that client, which may include consideration of a client's wider relationship within the DB Group, a client's credit rating, overall revenue opportunity, capital requirements for banks, or the structure and complexity of clearing service requirements for that CCP.

This illustration is based on (i) a client having a Net Omnibus Account with Deutsche Bank and at the CCP and (ii) a client not transferring a trade to or from Deutsche Bank for clearing during the tenor of the trade.

It assumes a client is holding one Long DAX Index Futures position.

It is using the CCP Initial Margin requirement, of €23,600, as at 14th November 2017 and assumes Deutsche Bank is applying no margin multiplier.
